

We are starting 2018 off right with all homes occupied.

The sales of the only two previously-available homes will close in January when Ronda and Chuck join us from New Mexico and Bob joins us from Stillwater. All three of them have already spent time with us and demonstrate their eagerness to be active participants in our community life.

Ronda, Chuck and Bob - Welcome to Oakcreek!

Bonnie moved into her home in September and helped with our 5-Year Anniversary public-awareness campaign by telling the world just how great it is to be living in cohousing.

With some reflection, Julie put pen to paper to share her and Mike's expectations about cohousing and the reality of their experience after living at Oakcreek for five years.

Students from OSU offer services to the community each fall during an event called “Into the Streets”. These young women helped us put a new layer of mulch on our labyrinth. After inquiring about the purpose of a labyrinth, they walked the paths and gathered at the center for prayer before they departed.... a blessing for us, and for them as well.

With a desire to counteract some of the rush of the Christmas Season, we started what may well become an Oakcreek tradition: a candlelight walk of the labyrinth at sundown on the first Sunday of Advent. Each walker silently and slowly carried battery operated candles into the labyrinth and positioned them along the paths for all to enjoy.

We were entertained at our Christmas party by a local group called the "Misspent Ukes". It was difficult to ascertain who had the most fun - the performers or us!

Those who chose to stay at home for the holidays welcomed a couple of guests and shared a toast along with a delicious pot-luck meal.

If you are interested in, or just curious about, what it means to live in a neighborhood with others committed to the reality of community, you are welcome to “COME AND SEE” by visiting us.

We maintain a list of persons who are ready to enjoy the many advantages of living in a participative community. When a home becomes available, we notify all persons on this list.
